A detailed 3D perspective line drawing of a traditional Japanese staircase, known as a kōshi. The staircase is constructed from vertical posts and horizontal steps, forming a rectangular frame. On the right side, a decorative arrangement of branches and flowers, called a kadomatsu, is attached to the structure. The base of the staircase is supported by several vertical posts, some of which are shown with dashed lines indicating their position relative to the ground. The drawing is a black and white line art illustration.
